Early Years Observation and Planning in Practice
Excellent text and content with clear links between theory and practice. Interesting reading that prompts students to consider observations and planning and their importance in the wider context. Practical examples encourage discussion and further development. A great text to support both FE and HE students. --Sue Davies, Tutor, Guildford College.

Very clear descriptions of the different methods of observation, with details of advantages and disadvantages. Excellent info included on the DVD, the mapping to the 2012 EYFS is very relevant. --Joyce Bradbury, Tutor & Assessor, Cheadle and Marple 6th Form College.

Good, clear information about adult and child-led activities/experiences - as students struggle to understand the difference. --Michelle Williams, Lecturer, Macclesfield College.

This is a simple text that clearly states the importance of planning and observations. The checklist is really clear and will support students in reflecting on practice... Good current methods. --Catherine Farnon, Lecturer in Childhood Studies, Highlands College.

This is a very useful and practical guide to current practice in EYFS. A must have for all Early Years PGCE students and teachers new to EYFS. --Jacqueline Young, Tutor, University of Sussex.

The whole book is pitched perfectly for L3 students and provides lovely practical steps on how to get observations right! ... I will be using this cover to cover with students and strongly recommending that they purchase a copy as this will be valuable for them throughout study and into their own professional practice. I will also be recommending this book to childminders that I work with. Many struggle with how to structure observations - this is a perfect tool! --Vicky Orlando, Early Years Ofsted Inspector and Lecturer, Cheadle College Network.

Good examples of techniques with advantages and disadvantages. Clear, easy to read and understand. Good examples of what not to do! --Jayne Double, Lecturer, Suffolk New College, Ipswich.

Observations and planning are two areas that students find difficult to write and implement in the setting, this is a very detailed and useful book from the beginning of why observations are needed to examples and case studies for the students to work from. CD rom also included linking to the EYFS 2014 which provides electronic copies on the example templates. A valuable resource to all L3 students and tutors. --Verity Bambury, Childcare and Early Years Lecturer, The City of Liverpool College.

Good, clear information about adult and child-led activities/experiences - as students struggle to understand the difference. --Michelle Williams, Lecturer, Macclesfield College.
